ST. CATHARINES MAN ELECTED HEAD OF REORGANIZED LINCOLN COUNTY LIBERAL ASSOCIATION

Fred A. Beattie Chosen Of Delegates At Beamsville Meeting Last Thursday Evening Succeeding Col. W. H. Singer — Federal And Provincial Bodies Merged Under New Constitution.

In a move which many of the younger members of the party had considered overdue, the Liberals of Lincoln County last Thursday evening swept away the last vestiges of the former provincial and federal associations, removed several of the Liberal veterans from their former positions, set up a new constitution and reorganized the party into one unit in a representative meeting held in the Community Hall, Beamsville.

Replacing Col. W. H. Singer, Niagara-on-the-Lake, for many years leader of the federal association, and a strong contender for the presidency, was defeated by Fred A. Beattie of St. Catharines. Archie J. Haines, resigned member of the Ontario legislature was also nominated, but he retired from the race.

Planning again for the vice-presidency, Col. Singer was defeated by Walter Sheppard, Queenston, a former warden of Lincoln County. Although the voting was done by ballot, and only accredited representatives of the various municipal associations were present, it is believed that the voting was heavily in favour of the new members.

The second vice-president, who, according to the new constitution, must be a woman, is Mrs. Angus Macdonald, St. Catharines. A stiff race for the position of secretary-treasurer went to Harry Cavers, St. Catharines, who beat out Stuart Fleming.

The meeting, which was held under the chairmanship of Joe J. Bench, K.C., St. Catharines, Liberal candidate for Lincoln in the last federal election, was largely attended, despite bad weather. In opening the meeting, Mr. Bench discussed the background of the Liberal Party in Lincoln, and revealed that when he was nominated he was careful not to seek the support of the two organizations then in existence, but to seek the support of Liberals as individuals.

"It is very heartening to see this fine turnout," he said. "Since 1934 there have been only three conventions. The meeting tonight is not for the nominating of a candidate, but for the election of officers and the organization of the new Liberal party in Lincoln County."

Prior to 1934, said Mr. Bench, there was a Liberal organization which did not possess personal or political differences in its ranks, and for the first time in forty years, a Liberal, Fred Avery, was returned.

"After 1934, in Lincoln County a federal Liberal association began to function in the federal field. It was never intended that there should be any parting of the ways with the existing organization, but there was a definite parting of the ways. I say, with regret, that we were unsuccessful in the next election, for if we had had a united Liberalism in 1935 as we had in 1934, we would have elected Mr. Coombs to the House. In 1937 we had the good sense to bury our differences and elect Mr. Haines to the House."

Discussing the election of 1940, Mr. Bench said: "The day following (his nomination) I went to one of our vice-presidents and told him that I did not intend to allow the Federal association to manage my campaign, but that I desired the help of all members. There was a fine, united effort. My defeat was in no sense due to lack of work, lack of good feeling or lack of co-operation on the part of anyone. I am sure that a united Liberal party in this county can win an election."

Mr. Bench described the work that had gone into the new organization which he was asking the delegates to approve, and stated that one of the results of this new constitution would be that there would be but one Liberal association in the county, and that the various municipalities in the County had approved of the constitution.

stoutly defending the role of the present government in the prosecution of the war Col. the Hon. Colin Gibson, Minister of National Revenue, scored those who are still calling for a national government.

Death Of George Bolton Followed Lengthly Illness

Former Town Auditor Mourned By Wide Circle Of Friends — Funeral This Evening With Interment At Kingston.

After a lingering illness of several years' duration, death came to George Edward Bolton early last Wednesday morning. He was in his sixty-seventh year.

Mr. Bolton, who was born in Smith Falls in 1875, was for many years a member of the audit staff of the Canadian Pacific Railway. His work took him to many parts of the Dominion, but nearly thirty years ago he retired to live in Grimsby. On his arrival here he took up residence on Maple Ave., moving some time later to the home in which he passed away on Robinson St. South.

After coming to Grimsby Mr. Bolton took over the audit of the Town of Grimsby and the Township of North Grimsby. His friendly interest in the affairs of his friends and neighbours brought many to him with their individual problems, and his keen advice was sought by those wishing to make investments, or filling out their tax returns.

Prior to the illness which overtook him some four years ago the deceased man was interested in sport, following the affairs of local hockey and baseball clubs with enthusiasm. He was also fond of bowling, and was for some time head of the Grimsby Lawn Bowling Club.

Last fall, when it became apparent to his many friends that Mr. Bolton's years as a business man were limited if not altogether finished, a few of his neighbours arranged for the collection of a testimonial purse by which he would be reminded of the esteem in which he was held. Without fanfare or publicity of any kind the fund soon grew to several hundred dollars, gifts from friends who wished in some way to show their appreciation of the many kindnesses they had received at his hands. The presentation of the purse was an event which greatly touched its recipient.

Funeral services will be held this evening at the Stonehouse Funeral Home, at eight o'clock and tomorrow the remains will be taken to Kingston. Interment will be in the family plot at Cataract Cemetery, near that city.

Besides his wife, the late Mr. Bolton leaves two sisters, Mrs. W. H. Edwards and Mrs. Fred MacGonegal of Smith Falls, and one brother, Wesley, Toronto.

Need Of First Aid Work Urgent

"I do not think one should blind oneself to all the experiences of this war in imagining that before it is over there will not be civilian casualties from enemy action on the soil of Canada," the Earl of Athlone said at a dinner of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem recently.

Preparations should be made at once through increased first aid training to meet the possibility of civilian casualties which may occur in Canada "anywhere and at any time," said the Governor-General.

"Whether these casualties will be the result of bombings or other enemy action no one can tell. Nor is it possible to say that any part of the country is less vulnerable than another," he said. "It would be a scandal if these casualties were aggravated by lack of immediate attention or by unskilled handling."

Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Boulter Smithville, who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on May 25th. They will be at home from 2 to 5 in the afternoon and from 8 until 10 in the evening to welcome any friends who wish to call.

Nursing Reserve Hears Lecture On Caring For Burns

Dr. B. T. Rogers' Remarks Followed Closely By Large Number Of Women — Fractures Discussed At Next Meeting.

An eager audience of 145 greeted Dr. Benson T. Rogers at Hawke's Hall on Monday evening when he addressed the Red Cross Emergency Reserve class on burns and scalds.

First dividing his subject into five heads — importance of burns, cause, types, degrees, and treatment, then enlarging on each in turn, Dr. Rogers pointed out that prevention is a saving of time and material, and that carelessness or lack of thought is the main cause of burns. More especially is this so in the case of the "domestic" burn or scald. People should become interested in First Aid, he said; it will better the community as a whole.

In treating a patient the condition of shock must be attended to first. If the burns are severe the sufferer must be wrapped in warm blankets, heat applied — taking care not to add to the burn — and such stimulants as hot tea or coffee administered. Sometimes a sedative is required. Then the clothing can be removed and the burned surface thoroughly cleansed with a very mild antiseptic. The dressing to be applied depends on the severity of the lesion. A picric acid solution, or tannic acid, are most commonly used. The various oils and greasy preparations once greatly advocated are now definitely out since they have no antiseptic properties, and prevent a "tan" forming when tannic dressing is applied by the doctor. Even a superficial burn should be brought to the attention of a doctor, as there is always danger of septic infection.

Tuesday evening, May 20th, at 8 o'clock, Dr. A. F. McIntyre will deal with fractures; the class meeting as usual in Hawke's Hall.

Trinity Y.P.U. Close Season With Banquet

Trinity Hall, very fittingly decorated in red, white and blue, was the scene of the annual closing banquet Monday night of the Trinity Young People's Union.

There were about thirty-five members and guests present, and after a very hearty supper under the arrangements of Misses Norma Jarvis, Muriel Watt, Alice Cramer and Shirley Heathcote, those present were very much entertained with a humorous talk by Mr. W. McElroy on the subject of Canadian Humour.

The toast to the King was proposed by George Curtis and responded to with the National Anthem. Mr. O. D. Davidson proposed the toast to the Church, responded to by Rev. W. J. Watt. Mrs. W. J. Watt then proposed the toast to the Young People's Union, and this was responded to by the president, Miss Maile Cullingford. Vocal numbers were very pleasingly rendered by Jack Ansel, after which Margaret Stevenson gave a very amusing monologue. Piano selections were played by Mr. Wm. Tufford.

The business meeting for the year closing was then held with the president presiding. After the treasurer's financial report was read and the minutes of the last meeting adopted, the slate of officers for the year 1942-43 was brought before the members and passed.

The officers for the coming year are: Honorary President, Rev. W. J. Watt; President, George Curtis; Vice-president, Clarence Fleming; Secretary, Isabel Pickett; Assistant Secretary, Genevieve Blanchard; Treasurer, Nellie Smith; Pianist, Glenna Farrell. Convener and their assistants of the committees are as follows: Culture, Maile Cullingford; Margaret Stevenson; Mission, Alice Cramer, Muriel Watt; Fellowship, Betty Theal; Madeline Blanchard; citizenship, (Continued on page 5)

GRIMSBY RED CROSS CAMPAIGN NEARS OBJECTIVE OF $5,000.00 HEADED OVER THE TOP AGAIN

Total of $4,113 Reached Last Night And Several Donations Still In Sight — Objective Of Former Campaign All But Passed — County Grant Of One Mill To Be Divided Here — Need Greater Than Ever, Says Chairman.

While still not quite up to the objective of $5,000, the Grimsby and District Red Cross Campaign neared its total, and with three days to go, announced last night that a total of $4,113 had been subscribed. "A making public these figures," Bert C. Bourne this morning declared that several other donations, aggregating $485, had been either promised or had been paid in but not as yet entered into the records.

The figure of $4,113 reached up to last night was within $75 of the total reached in the last Red Cross campaign held here, and it brings Grimsby well to the forefront of the communities of Lincoln County and the province generally. Emphasizing the importance of the drive now on was a telegram received by Mrs. R. N. Wolfenden, Grimsby District branch president, this week from Mrs. Wallace Campbell, president of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross Society:

"Mr. Justice Gordon, chairman National Executive, wires his deep concern about subscriptions to date. Urges all branches redouble efforts this week. Minimum objective must be substantially exceeded before June 1st as Government launches War Savings Campaign that date. Ontario division must not fail. Urges that telegraph form be filed Friday night showing all branches exceed objective."

Bearing out the wording of this wire are reports received from various centers up to last night, which showed many Ontario communities falling back on their objective. Chatham, with an objective of $30,000, has reached a total of only $5,514. Stratford has taken in $9,371 of its $22,000 objective, while Trenton, with an objective of $4,500, has only realized $1,125.

While there are indications that the Grimsby total would soar well over the objective without its help, the Lincoln County Council yesterday voted to divide up $10,000 among the seven Lincoln County municipalities outside of St. Catharines. This will mean a considerable boost to the municipalities, for the division is to be made on the same basis as the objectives were set, that is, on the assessment. For this purpose Grimsby and North Grimsby Township are two municipalities. Mr. Bourne emphasized that the division of money had not yet been made, and that it should not result in a lagging of the private returns.

"There are still a few days to go before the end of the campaign, and there are still a number of people who have not subscribed who should have. The need is urgent, and money contributed to this cause next month or two months from now will not help us now. We must exceed our objective, and we must do so before the end of the week and without the help of the grant from the county council. I feel certain that we shall, and that when the campaign is over we will have done it again."

WOMEN ALLOW ELECTION BY LIONS CLUB

Jas. W. Baker Named President Of Local Club — Women Run Meeting And Vote Red Cross Donation — Also Allow Carnival Discussion.

Members of the Grimsby Lions Club are now thoroughly ready to argue the point regarding the ability of women to keep a secret. They had the fact that they are simply demonstrated to them last Tuesday evening when they assembled for the semi-monthly meeting.

On entering the dining-room they found, scattered conveniently at all the tables, the wives whom they had left behind them. The ladies took hold of the program for the night and handled it in fine style. Penalties were levied against the few who thought enough of their spouses to sit with them, while chairwoman Mrs. Erwin Phelps accepted a motion, had it duly seconded and past, that the Lions Club donate $100 to the Red Cross. It was also agreed that the penalty proceeds amounting to $5.50 be turned over to the same organization. P. V. Smith, speaking to the motion to donate $100 which his wife had just made, was heard out after asking permission to speak. He explained that the money would be guaranteed, and that one of the booths at the forthcoming Carnival would be turned over to the ladies.

The ladies allowed the members present to have some part of the program in order to discuss the carnival and receive nominations for next year's executive. The nominating committee, consisting of past presidents of the club and president A. H. Globe, read its report, and when there were no further nominations from the floor James W. Baker was proclaimed president for the ensuing year.

Clerk Of Lincoln County Retires

Camby Wismer, veteran of municipal politics in Lincoln County for many years, and an official of the County's administration since 1907, yesterday tendered his resignation to the Lincoln County Council at its annual monthly meeting. His resignation, said to have been prompted on the grounds of indifferent health, was accepted with regret, and deputy-clerk W. H. Millward was appointed to carry on with Mr. Wismer's duties until a successor is appointed.

Mr. Wismer was reeve of Louth township when he received his appointment as treasurer of the county in 1907, and he took over the duties of clerk in 1923. As clerk-treasurer, he came to know municipal representatives from all over the Niagara Peninsula, and his opinions on municipal law and administration were often sought and freely given.

In accepting his resignation, the county agreed to continue to pay fifty per cent of his salary until the end of the year. The resignation becomes effective immediately.

He received his initial training at Regina and from there took an elementary flying course at No. 15 E. F. T. S. Boundary Bay, B.C. He graduated early in March, 1942 from No. 7 S.F.T.S. at Macleod Alberta where he was awarded his wings and commission.

MORE LETTERS FROM BRITAIN SAY "THANKS"

Local Boys Show Appreciation Of Smokes Sent From Here Under Auspices Of Chamber Of Commerce.

Dear Sir:

Many thanks for the carton of cigarettes. They were most acceptable. It always cheers one up to be remembered by the folks back home.

As you know there are a good many Grimsby and district boys in this unit. Although at present I am not with the battalion, I understand they are first rate soldiers. Occasionally I meet some of them when on leave and of course it is very interesting exchanging bits of news of our home town.

Thanking you once more for the cigarettes, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

R. O. Hunter.

I sure appreciate the cigarettes as a good Canadian smoke comes in handy here. It certainly encourages a fellow to get something from his home town. Congratulations on your good work. Thanks a million.

Just received your much appreciated parcel of smokes today and must thank the responsible parties (Continued on page 5)

Sunday School Lesson

SUNDAY, MAY 24th

Thursday: The Last Day With His Disciples

(Luke 22:14-38)

GOLDEN TEXT

Do this in remembrance of me.
(Luke 22:19).

Approach to The Lesson

The institutions of the Lord's Supper followed immediately after the Passover, which Jesus participated in with His disciples. It was the last Passover feast that God ever recognized for He who sat that night at the head of the table was Himself to die as the true paschal lamb on the following day. The Lord's supper was destined to be the characteristic feast of the new dispensation. In its observance we remember Him personally and we show His death till He come, a reminder of the one sacrifice offered on the cross which has settled the sin question to the divine satisfaction.

A Lesson Outline

The two suppers—in Luke 22.
The Passover preparation, verses 7-13.

Its observance, verses 14-18.

The Lord's Supper, the bread, verse 19.

The cup, picturing the blood of the new covenant, verse 20.

His betrayal foretold, verses 21-23.

Strife rebuked and humility enjoined, verses 24-27.

The promise of the kingdom, verses 28-30.

Heart of The Lesson

Many are the precious lessons associated with the remembrance of the Lord Jesus in His death as we sit at the table of the Lord. We recall Him to mind in His lowliness, His sacrificial death, of His love for us even to the shedding of His precious blood to put away our sins, we look on, in faith too, to His return for His Saints and to take His great power and reign, it is to be observed till He come.

The Children's Crusade

The Children's Crusade, that remarkable movement among the children of France and Germany in the dawn of the thirteenth century has been a constant theme of poet and painter. No account of it was written by a participant. Stories have come down from chroniclers who knew something of the beginnings of the enterprise, who saw the children on the march, but who depended upon hearsay and their own imagination for the more fabulous and sensational features of their narratives. The testimony of hysterical children who shared in the crusade was taken as incontrovertible evidence, and a vast number of legends resulted. In that troubled and murky era it was well-nigh impossible to get at the truth of anything.

It is easy, however, to understand how the movement started. Everywhere, in the churches, on the streets of the town, and on the country roads, the clerics were making impassioned appeals to the people to support the crusades. Crusaders passed along to the sound of hymns and the swinging of banners. Tales of the mighty deeds of these knights were told to the little boys and girls as they clustered open-mouthed about their parents' knees. In 1212 a half-demented priest went from town to town preaching a Children's Crusade. "Why have the other Crusades failed?" he cried. "Was it not because the men who joined them were not pure in thought and heart? To you children it is given to see free Jerusalem! God calls you. He will surely work miracles for all along the way. The water of the sea shall be dried up for you to pass over. The Saracen will see in terror before you, and you, the pure in heart, shall see the city of God. Lo! it has been revealed to me that these things shall be."

The children left their games and listened to this appeal and they trudged after the frenzied priest under a sort of spell. Superstition was in the air and many believed that this was a call from Heaven. A French shepherd boy named Stephen, in the village of Cloyes, near Vendôme, France, made a profound impression on young and old by declaring that the Lord had appeared to him in the guise of a humble pilgrim and had given him a message to carry to the king. The ancient chronicles are full of the miracles wrought through him and other "holy boys." Stephen, accompanied by other shepherd lads of his own age, went from town to town, saying that Christ had ordered him to lead a company of children to the Holy Land, there to wrest his sepulchre from the unbeliever. His youth, his prepossessing appearance and fiery eloquence, moved all who heard him, and the children hailed him as their leader. Thousands ran after him, and the cry: "God wills it! God wills it!"

As they marched they sang the song of the old crusaders, with its repeated refrain: "Lord, restore Christendom; Lord, restore to us the true and holy cross." For two centuries this watchword had sounded over Europe and in Asia, and had spurred on the Christian knights in all their battles with the Saracens. It was estimated that the number who followed Stephen was 70,000.

Many of the children were only ten or eleven years of age, while others were only seven or eight. They were accompanied by a few adults, some of them mothers with babies in their arms.

The German children, said to have numbered 20,000, were led by a youth named Nicholas. They marched up the Rhine Valley, crossed the Alps, and proceeded to Genoa. The night of the blue Mediterranean renewed their courage for they had been promised that it would roll back as did the Red Sea for the Children of Israel, and provide a passage to the Holy Land. They waited weeks for a miracle that never happened. The company began to thin out; some wandered down to Rome to see the Pope. A few were adopted by noble Genoese. (Continued on page 7)

The Poem And The Poetess

Our Weekly Poem is part of a longer one appearing in a volume of the Anglo-American Magazine, dated 1853, and published in Toronto by T. Mackay, which has just come into our hands.

At the time the poem was printed, Queen Victoria had been on the throne 15 years, was 34 years old, and had been happily married to Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg Gotha for 13 years. In April of the same year her youngest daughter and eighth child, Beatrice, had been born.

In the two stanzas omitted the soldier of old England and the "poetess" come in for their share of praise, thus completing the scale of Degrees.

Agnes Strickland, who wrote the poem, was one of four accomplished sisters who lived at Reydon Hall, Suffolk. Agnes wrote on historical subjects, the best known of her works being The Lives of the Queens of England. Reydon Hall was a damp, dismal old house, and the earnings of the clever sisters must have been very welcome to add a few comforts to the bare necessities of life.

Kate, Susanna and a brother, Samuel, emigrated to Canada. Susanna arriving in 1832 with her husband, Lieut. J. W. Dunbar Moodie. To Susanna Moodie we are indebted for that Canadian classic, Roughing It in the Bush. She was also one of our earliest writers of poetry.

In the same 88-year-old volume there is a series of articles entitled "Forest Gleanings" and a shorter one called "The Canadian Flower Gatherer," written by Kate Strickland, (Mrs. Trull) from her home, Oriskany, Rice Lake, near Peterborough. Mrs. Moodie lived in the same district.

The Forty In 1813

The village on the Forty-Mile Creek saw stirring times in the War of 1812. In an account of the war in the Anglo-American Magazine, mentioned above, the author's name is not given—there is a letter from Brig-Gen. Vincent to Sir George Prevost, dated from Forty-Mile Creek, May 28th, 1812, reporting his evacuation of Fort George, written while retreating to Head of the Lake.

Just ten days afterwards the skirmish of Stony Creek took place, Vincent making a surprise attack by night from Head of the Lake, seven miles away, with a small force of men having only 80 rounds of ammunition each, on General Chandler and Windler who had been sent in pursuit of Vincent with two brigades of infantry and 280 cavalry. The Americans were routed horse and foot and the two generals taken prisoner, along with 100 other officers and men.

In local daylight the scattered Americans ventured back to their camp, destroyed equipment, ammunition and provisions, and beat a hasty retreat toward The Forty. On arriving there they found 2000 men, on the march from Niagara to reinforce them, too late.

If ever a man was in a tight spot it was General Vincent that night. Fort George had fallen, so had York. He was between the two. The lake was alive with American ships of war. There was only one thing to do: Attack!

The Queen's Birthday

The 24th of May was the day to go fishing at the Outlet, and marked the opening of the rod and line season in Grimsby. The equipment, with the possible exception of the hook, was more often home-made than not, but if the wind was a bit east—which it should be for good fishing—the home-grown rod's execution was equal to that of the store rod.

Certain old-timers of the village never missed a 24th at the Outlet or on the pier. With a can of fishworms, dug first thing in the morning, or even the night before, and luncheon in a grape basket, they wended their way to the lake and spent the whole day in peace and quiet—for fishing is a pastime for quite people—with the gulls, graceful galleons of the lake and sky, for company, and a kingfisher or two fishing up and down the pond, under the willows, for colour accent. The catch was not of the first importance. The outing was the thing.

Children of all ages were up at peep of dawn to set off firecrackers. From ten on there was a fusillade of major and minor explosions from every quarter of the village. The grand climax came after dark when a group of young people climbed the Mountain and staged a display of fireworks on the top of Split Rock, watched from below by the appreciative villagers in the security of their own doors.

Often the day ended with a Band Concert under the direction of Captain Starn from the bandstand on Main Street. It stood in the vacant space between the Mansion House and the Malakoff. The concert was sometimes preceded by a torchlight procession, and accompanied by the fire brigade.

Not Rationed

Here are some things that have not been rationed yet.—The laughter of little children at play, the singing of birds, the shade of trees, the sun on the General McArthur and Mrs. John Laing bazaar, the scent of sprays at the gate, the reading of fine books, church-going, letters from friends, the night family hymn-singing rally, gardening.

"God the first garden made, and the first city, Cain."—Cowley.

How Does Your Victory Garden Grow?

From that immortal it was the custom in our village to "make garden" on the 24th of May. The adventurous soul who planted before that day was taking big chances, for not until then was danger of frost considered to be over. Now, it is the day to finish planting and seeding. It is still a pleasant custom to share the first-fruits with the neighbour. Rhubarb, lettuce and asparagus are now making the rounds.

THE QUEEN AND ALL DEGREES

(By Agnes Strickland—1853)
The Queen of merry England,
The royal and the fair
Our English-born Victoria,
For her we'll breathe a prayer;
Oh, Queen of merry England,
Auspicious be thy reign,
And may thy glorious annals be
Unscathed by a stain.

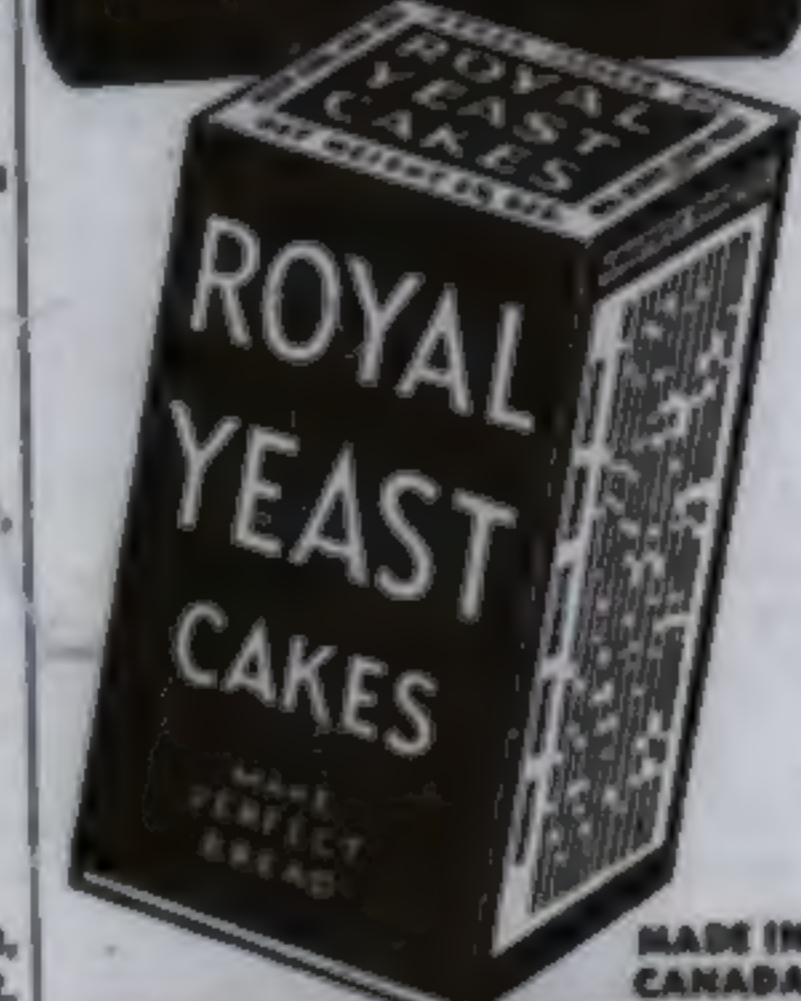

The noblemen of England
The bulwarks of the crown,
Whose fathers won by lofty deeds,
Their honour and renown;
Oh, noblemen of England,
Be worthy of their fame,
And let your own bright deeds
Adorn
The proud descent ye claim.

The gentlemen of England,
The virtuous and the free,
Who boast the happiest lot of all,
Nor high nor low degree;
Oh, gentlemen of England,
In country and in town,
Be faithful to the people's cause,
And loyal to the crown.

The merchants of old England,
Whose honour and whose worth,
Are known in every port and mart,
Throughout the peopled earth;
Oh, merchants of old England,
Propitious be each breeze
That homeward wafts your golden malls,
Ye princes of the seas.

The seamen of old England,
The bravest of the brave,
Who've humbled every hostile fleet,
That ever swept the wave;
Oh, seamen of old England,
Yell triumph yet again,
Where'er ye bear Britannia's flag,
Along the rolling main.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD PICTURE COMPOSITION

Good arrangement makes this picture striking. A few simple rules, wisely applied, will help you improve your own snapshots.

MANY volumes have been written on composition—some of them excellent treatises on the subject—and there have been an untold number of discussions of what makes a picture pictorial. Unfortunately much of this material is so complicated and involved that it frightens the average amateur.

Generally speaking, the "composition" of a picture is simply a pleasing arrangement—an arrangement that "feels" right and satisfies the eye. In taking pictures, a little thought and common sense are better than a whole encyclopedia of rules.

Every picture subject is different, and no rule or set of rules can cover everything. When you choose a picture subject, simply ask yourself—"What arrangement of this will be most pleasing in the print?" Visualize the possibilities, then arrange the parts of your picture so that they carry out that idea. After that, simply frame your subject properly in the viewfinder, and release the shutter.

In pictorial composition, there are a few basic points that, if remembered, will aid anyone in making more attractive pictures. Have but one main or dominating center of interest. See that each picture tells only one story. The principal subject may be flowers, one person or several, a nearby pond, or a distant mountain; but whatever it is, give that subject proper prominence.

Then there should be objects of secondary importance, unless it is a close-up portrait. If the picture is a group of trees, a second group, a little farther away, will help toward balance. When people are in a picture and the principal thing you wish to photograph is a distant mountain, give them look—not at the camera, but toward the mountains.

Backgrounds too are important in composition. Be sure that no tree branches are apparently growing out of a person's head, or an uncovered trellis or clapboard house is used for a background.

Organize the component parts of your pictures just as you would a room in your house. Spend a few extra minutes in planning, and work out the details before you shoot. It's not difficult—just arrange your snapshots in the viewfinder to please the eye, and you'll get better pictures.

Have but one main or dominating

RADIO SPOTLIGHT

DIALING WITH DAVE

Very often, the average listener in the average radio home, forgets that the local station he listens to, day after day, has one primary objective—that of being a real service to the community. Granted, it offers varied entertainment, much of it presented under the banner of commercial sponsorship; but day after day, unheralded, it brings to its listeners Community Service features, recruiting drive programs, war savings and Victory Bond rallies, Red Cross talks, and service features for a variety of organizations, almost without number. Effective news coverage is another service feature that is taken for granted, yet the development, analysis and presentation of effective news coverage is a big problem, involving much work, organization and programming. Just for a day or two, listen to your local station not with the habitual "take it for granted" attitude, but with a directly critical attitude of how well it SERVES THE COMMUNITY. Much you hear will surprise and please you.

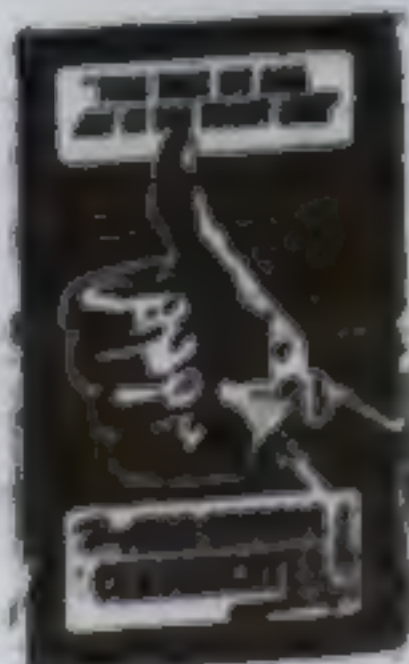

Here are some dates and notes of interest to listeners one and all: The CBC National News is now being heard at ten o'clock in the evening, one hour earlier than formerly. You're probably accustomed to the change by now, since it went into effect on Sunday, May 10th. Its time change effected two outstanding programs: Penny's Diary is now heard from 8.05 to 8.30 p.m. Thursdays, and Voices of Victory is broadcast Fridays at 10.15 right after the news. Boris Karloff's latest guesting date, originally scheduled for last Sunday on the Inner Sanctum Mysteries, will be heard this Sunday instead. Catch the great mystery show at 8.30 this Sunday night from CKOC. Gail Meredith, CBC songstress and the feminine half of the famous boy and girl friend team of years gone by, recently visited the Tivoli in Hamilton, and since her hubby is an old Western Friend of your scribbler's, gave out with the information that she's vocalizing with the Friday night eight o'clock Woodhouse & Hawkins show from Manning Depot. Was good to see and hear her again. And just the added note: CKOC, 1150 on your dial, is carrying the program, and it is followed by the Bandwagon—another topnotch variety show.

This and that of regular listening interest from CKOC: Toast and Marmalade, with our two lads Joe and Len—8.15 to 9.00 a.m. daily. Nice blending—Jack Wilkinson's Record Album—daily at 10.30 a.m. Joe Chrysdale's sports—8.10 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. daily.

Hollywood Headliners—news and movie gossip with Stella Under at 3.00 p.m. daily. Action drama—the all-time year round favorite of youngsters and oldsters alike: The Lone Ranger, Monday through Friday at 5.30 p.m.

Record of the week—Skyline, recorded by Glen Miller, Harry James and others.

SULTRY SONGSTRESS

Gwen Bradshaw was a member of a carefree party at a high school dance in Winnipeg when she made her debut on a dare. She sang a number with the band playing the latest popular hits for the youngsters. She wasn't nervous then, and she isn't nervous now, but she is just as excited about singing on the air as when she first started professionally in Geoffrey Waddington's "Swinging Strings". (That was away back in 1939 A.D. Now she is singing star of "Tunes for Today", heard Wednesdays at 10.45 p.m. EDT, 11.45 p.m. ADT., with Albert Pratt conducting, Sam McKeown arranging.

Early Morning
Walk Healthy

"Walk your way to health" is the advice of E. A. Conklin, writing in the current issue of "Kyklos".

He asks: "Are you one of those who dislike the very thought of walking when a car, bus or other vehicle is available? 'If you are', he advises, "it's really too bad, because apart from its many physical benefits, a daily walk actually improves your mental condition tremendously. If you're inclined to be melancholy when you awake in the morning, a walk will help chase away your depression. If you have deep-rooted worries on your mind, walking will give your weary brain a temporary respite and allow you to face your difficulties a little later with renewed vitality".

Mr. Conklin believes that posture is important in walking. He says: "Your mind half the joys life can offer if your head is up in the clouds or directed towards the street beneath your feet. Try being comfortably erect, watching and checking on yourself at frequent intervals. If the muscles which control your posture have become a bit stiff and cause unwelcome pains, keep at it; slowly but surely nature will adjust you to your newly found physical position".

"Hand is hand with correct posture", writes Mr. Conklin, "goes the mileage you may put into your daily walking expeditions. For the beginner, a mile is sufficient. The experienced walker can gracefully stand four times as much. Walkers find that by gradually increasing the scope of their walks at the rate of an additional half mile each week, they are soon able to look a five mile hike in the face without wincing".

Early morning hikes are recommended by Mr. Conklin. "They stimulate the faded appetite, and after a few weeks a 'toned-up' effect will be noticeable". "Set the alarm clock at six or seven o'clock and start out briskly to cover the prescribed distance. The average person can finish a three or four mile walking tour in a little more than an hour at the most, which means that you will reach home in time for a satisfying breakfast."

GREAT BRITAIN'S BLACK MARTS
RUN BY "BIG BOYS AT THE TOP"
MADDEN LAW ABIDING CITIZENS

—By MARGARET BUTCHER—
(Especially written for The Grimsby Independent and the Midland Free Press)

Reading, England—No, it isn't easy to write just now. One is so afraid, somehow, of swaying too much one way or the other: of being thought gloomy or—worse still—foolishly cheerful. So how about being quite natural and letting it run on as it comes? And what's just what I'm going to do.

The news, naturally, hurts and maddens us—just as it does you, I guess. Who and what is to blame? And all the while The Pattern goes on working out, and in spite of everything that is happening, I hope, a pattern of a better and more sensible world. Plenty of us can see that the world has been a bit of a mess for a long while; personally, I think it's been rather a mess for centuries. Perhaps this drastic and terrible spring-cleaning will do what nothing else has been able to do. For pity's sake, let's MAKE it do so!

For my part, I am convinced that all the trouble started (and always has started) from that shocking habit of refusing to believe unpleasant things. All over the world folk have done it; it seems to be inseparable from what we call 'civilization.' If you're comfortable yourself, and don't want to notice—or think about—something uncomfortable... well, simply pretend that it isn't there. So much more snug than disturbing yourself!

If somebody tells you the Other Fellow is going to do a disgraceful act before you can turn round, you look shocked and assure your informant that he has base ideas, and that the Other Fellow is a decent sort of chap, no doubt. Who ever heard—your think—of anybody going to a party with a knuckle-duster in his pocket? Well, I may be wrong, but, if there are going to be suspected toughs at that party, it wouldn't seem to me to be a bad notion. But then, perhaps I have a naughty mind. All the same, I know, there might not be any occasion to whip out your hand and land somebody one. The party might turn out quite all right—a long as nobody grabbed more than his share of the cake.

Black Market Business

We are hopping mad about our own particular spot of cake-grabbing that is going on—this Black Market business. Something will have to be done about that. Last night I made a man I know promise faithfully that he would write to his Member of Parliament, and get a wad of signatures to his letter.

If everybody would do that the stir would be enough to work the miracle. After all, what else can the ordinary, law-abiding citizen do? Here we are making our rations do their work, trying to save—and these voracious, money-grubbing brutes go on pandering to the folk who just won't play ball.

What's the use of punishing the small man? It's the Big Boys at the top who've got to catch it. No, you're simply no idea how angry we are. I wonder how they would react to the promise of a firing squad? Anyhow, if this sort of thing should start on your side, don't you stand any nonsense—from the word 'Go.' If there is food it should be available to all, and at a reasonable price. And these folk who have always gorged themselves two or three times a day should learn that war—no matter who and what they are—means a salutary tightening of the belt. Oh, we know a good bit of what goes on, believe me! There is a nest of 'em, and it will have to be smothered out. And now I've spilled that I feel better.

Don't Trust The Sun

Today—early in April—the sun shines warmly—at last. It has been a terrible winter; and even now I don't trust it. The frosts are still hard, and the poor allotment lies there helpless. My warmest dressing-gown—carefully for we must save fuel, of course—patched—covers me in the house. The nice, kindly soul with whom I now live looks with an indulgent eye on this battered relic of better days, and has taken to the habit herself. She is a woman who has and has had a beautiful home; yet always been comfortably well off, she does not think of grabbing, or of wasting anything. As a matter of fact, all the people one really knows are pulling their weight.

We have just signed a paper of offering shelter for a few hours to any neighbour who may be bombed out. We all hope it won't happen, but we're ready. For our own shelter there is only a tiny cupboard under the stairs; but she's the sort of woman with whom one could share such adversity and maintain courage and self-respect. You remember 'Gran', who raised her glass at her birthday party and said that she was glad, glad to be alive in these vital times? Well, this is Gran herself.

We keep to our own rooms and don't worry each other, and I still do my cooking on my own private gas-ring—unless the downstairs oven is going, when I take a share in it, for economy's sake. Thus, gradually, does one learn to fit in with the rigor of the times. She has two sons in the East, but she shows courage and cheerfulness all ways. I don't wear by heart on my sleeve she says, but I guess there are some rather and anxious hours for her down there in her pretty sitting-room.

Wasting of Paper

Now there is this new order forbidding the wasting of paper—though it simply staggers me that anybody should waste. For the comfort of those dear souls who send me letters, papers or parcels from Canada, I can assure them that not one scrap is lost to the war effort. It is all saved up and, once a fortnight, put out in a neat bundle for the dustmen. This new order, I hope, will start a good national habit, for I am afraid we are an atrociously untidy nation.

It has always been impossible to go anywhere within ten miles of a town without finding the woods and fields littered with picnic-remains, ice-cream cups and cigarette packets. Why on earth people can't bring back their rubbish—or bury it—I don't know.

One never sees rubbish in the streets in Scandinavia. That is one of the first things which struck me about the place. It's early training of course; make the kids rubbish-conscious and the trick is done. So here's to the new law. Neatness may be one of the good things which will come out of this horrible mess of war. I guess we shall learn many things.

And there are folk with a lot to learn, I assure you. Some time ago, in the lounge of an hotel, I came upon a most unpleasant young man—apparently in a reserved occupation, since I have never seen him in uniform. A nasty little bit of work, that young man. There were just a few of us present and, for our entertainment and enlightenment, he started telling us how he could get a good suit without coupons. A wink and a tip, we gathered, in the right quarter, and the trick was done. The young idiot even mentioned the store. Of course, we were expected to exclaim: "How smart of you! DO give us the name of your friend!" And then, no doubt, he would shake his head knowingly and say that he couldn't give his pals away; and we would go home thinking what a very clever and worldly person he was. Actually, silence, flat and disapproving greeted his announcement. (Personally, I found myself discounting it as silly boasting, or there would have been some spectacular fireworks, friends.) He caught my eye and I glared back darkly. If he went about with that sort of tale, I said, loudly and firmly, there would soon be trouble for him and for the firm in question—and the sooner the better.

Yes, the whole story fell very flat and he then drifted out. When he sees me now he fades rapidly from the picture, realising that the glove is down between us. He thinks of me, you may be sure as "that horrible little woman in the corner." I am so glad.

FULL DETAILS OF THE NEW ORDER ARE OBTAINABLE
FROM ANY TIRE DEALER

Very severe penalties will be imposed for any infractions of the new regulations. The tire dealers of Canada are co-operating with the Government in the efficient operation of the order, and in its enforcement. It is their patriotic duty to repair and legally resell all usable tires in their possession, and turn over at once to the nearest salvage agency any scrap rubber they have on hand or receive in the future, including all tires and tubes no longer serviceable.

Every person, whether a dealer or not, must report by May 31 to the Tire Rationing Representative at his nearest War-time Prices and Trade Board office, all tires and tubes in his possession on May 15, which are not scrap, and which are not on the running wheels and one spare rim of each vehicle he owns.

"Thank God For The Red Cross"

THOSE of our readers who recall the interesting letter from Robert Aldrick which was published a few weeks ago will be interested in noting that this letter has played a big part in the current Canadian Red Cross campaign for nine million dollars. In newspaper advertising and on billboards have been pictures of a prisoner of war, and the heading was "Thank God For The Red Cross." The letter itself was forwarded to Red Cross headquarters in Toronto, from where copies were sent out to Canadian newspapers. This letter has thus been read by several thousands of Canadians.

In asking permission to use the letter in publicity for the campaign, Mr. Stafford Roberts, commissioner for the Ontario Division of the Red Cross, remarked that it "is so comprehensive and so sincerely written that it appeals to us as a very valuable piece of publicity which the Canadian Red Cross would appreciate using."

It is something of an honour for this community to have been able to provide the "catch-word" for a national campaign for such a worthy cause. It is only to be hoped that when this campaign is over it will have been proven that Grimsby was worthy of this honour, and that the donations of her citizens to this vital project were "so comprehensive and so sincere" that Bob Aldricks from all over the Dominion will feel that the folks at home are backing them up properly.

Two Fine Achievements

THERE are several Canadians who delight in belittling the war record of their own country, probably not so much from the standpoint of disparaging the Dominion so much as using that means to show their dislike for the Government. There is no reason why anyone should not be free to disagree with the manner in which the affairs of their country are being managed. The war is right now the most important matter before this country, occupying the greater portion of the affairs of state. The war record of this country is one well worthy of the Dominion. When we hear the whole war record considered as naught because a critic does not like one aspect or another of the manner in which it is being handled, one has to question that critic's sense of values. When one hears the war effort as a whole being run into the ground simply because a critic does not like the government in power, one feels like Henry Ford, when, in an unguarded moment, he was heard praising some aspect of the Russian system. Praise of one aspect of the Soviet system led many to believe that he was embracing Communism, and his reply was that the whole shirt did not have to be destroyed simply because one button was broken.

To those critics of the government who still believe that the whole war effort must be torn down completely in order for them to get at the government, two recent events must surely make them realize that on at least some important matters the government is on sound ground. The first of these was the adoption by the United States of a planned economy patterned rather closely after the regulations of the War-time Prices and Trade Board. These far-reaching regulations which have been adopted as a means of curbing inflation are revolutionary in character, and it will be some time before their actual worth can be determined. To date it is apparent that they have brought to a virtual halt the dangerous rise in the cost of living. That the most powerful single nation on earth should pattern their wartime economic measures after those adopted by Canada is a tribute to the skill of those who planned them for us. It surely should go a long way to counteract the harping criticism which started immediately after the regulations were promulgated, and before there was time to even judge them on their merits.

The second incident which stands as a tribute to Canadian leadership is the conference now being held in Ottawa by leaders of the Allied air forces. Few Canadians actually realize the full extent of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan being sponsored by this country. Veteran airmen from the United States, some of them Transatlantic celebrities with thousands of flying hours to their credit, were brought to this country to act as instructors. In more than one isolated instance world-famous flyers have given up their instructional work for periods of several weeks in order that they might receive the training afforded recruits in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

And now the Allied powers are looking to Canada for leadership in a program to co-ordinate their air training. From Great Britain, the United States, China and several other countries leading figures in the world of aviation are meeting in Ottawa to unify their air program. They will have suggestions to offer Canada, but, as one prominent United States Army flier said this week, the program which Canada has laid out is "marvelous, we can't and we don't want to change it. We are here to see what makes it operate and to try and bring our own program in line with it."

When there are those who persist in saying that their own country is "doing nothing," it is well to remember these two great contributions being made to the Allied war effort by a nation of but twelve million people.

Timely Action

THE action of the C.C.F. party in seeking writs for by-elections to fill six seats in the Ontario Legislature is one which might quite properly have been taken by the Conservative Party when it became apparent that there was no disposition to do so by the provincial administration. If the situation in one which does not show the Ontario government in a particularly good light, it is one which reflects similarly on the Conservative members of the house.

Mr. Hepburn has given it as his opinion that the spending of approximately fifty thousand dollars on by-elections during wartime is unnecessary. That in the figure which he estimates it will cost to conduct these by-elections. It is difficult to reconcile the saving afforded by the dropping of democratic rights and perogatives for this reason with several other items of expenditure made in wartime which might well have been dropped with a saving of many times the amount of the by-elections in money and, what is more important, commodities which could have gone into the war production of this country. One does not have to wander far from here to see thousands of electric light standards put into place since the war started, and now contributing nothing to the lighting effect of the Queen Elizabeth Way. If it was important that these lights be strung between Toronto and Niagara Falls and then turned off, it is important that nearly eight per cent of the citizens of the province have their due representation in the Ontario Legislature.

The necessity of by-elections in Great Britain, even in wartime, is recognized in Great Britain, where government candidates have been beaten on not a few occasions recently. The only difference between the two situations is that in Great Britain democratic rights are still recognized, and the government is not adverse to have a negative vote recorded occasionally.

It was stated some months ago that there would be no by-elections called to fill the seats that are now vacant because of a general election which should have been called this year. When this reason was given it was accepted by quite a few as more or less reasonable. Now, with the concurrence of the Conservative opposition, the Ontario government has extended its life by one year, and no mention of the vacancies was to be heard from the floor of the house when this measure was being discussed. It is rather a startling commentary on our representative system that Queen's Park that it was left to a party without any sitting members to take appropriate action to remedy the situation. If, as Mr. Hepburn says, the action is being taken by a group seeking power for themselves, it would appear that any offices which fell to them would be empty desired.

Wake Up!

THERE may be solid grounds for the comforting words which Mr. Churchill has been using of late. He has earned the right to use comforting words. It may be that the relative position in Europe as a whole is less unfavorable than sober judges thought last winter. It would be by this time. But it would be worse to fooly to count any of these chickens until they are hatched or to think for an instant that the worst is over rather than ahead of us. As for our own part in the war, the spectacle of merchant ships being sunk in large numbers right off our own shores is a challenge which will become as humiliating as it is critically dangerous if we do not rise up to meet it.

We are not rising up to meet it. We are arguing about gasoline rationing cards, and not about the fact that in our own waters we are taking no extraordinary measures to protect our ships and to save the crews. We are acting like a hen which is fascinated by a snake. The complacency with which these tragic disasters are being accepted by the Government and by the people is shocking, and it is unworthy of the brave men who are fighting our battles on the sea, on land, and in the air.

It is no sufficient and acceptable explanation to say that we are fighting a seven-ocean war with a one-ocean navy, and that our regular organized naval forces are fully engaged in more vitally important tasks. That is true, and every report that comes from competent observers brings testimony to the courage and skill and the momentum of the fighting navy. The battle which we face in our own waters is of a different order of things: It is the kind of battle where the organized professional fighting services cannot prevail unless they call the people themselves to arms.—By Walter Lippmann in his Syndicated Column.

The excellent response by citizens to the China War Relief appeal is a tribute to their recognition of a worthy cause, and to the young ladies who so ably undertook the work of collecting it.

There is still time to make your Red Cross donation, or to make another if you already have contributed. Grimsby must go well over the top in this effort!

Getting Busy

From The Huron Examiner

FOLLOWING their remarkable success in the recent Federal by-election in North York, where their candidate succeeded in defeating the leader of the Canadian Conservative party, by a majority of several thousands, in a traditionally Conservative riding, the C.C.F. announced their intention of placing a candidate in every Ontario riding at the next Provincial election.

The Legislative elections, however, having been postponed for at least a year, the C.C.F. party is, apparently, not prepared to wait that long to make its bid for representation in the Ontario Legislature. It is going to get busy now.

On Saturday last, F. Andrew Brewin, chairman of the Ontario C.C.F. election committee, announced that legislation will be undertaken to force the Hepburn Government to hold by-elections for the six vacancies now existing in the Legislature.

On the same day, W. H. Temple, president of the C.C.F. constituency council in Toronto, High Park, one of the vacant constituencies, wrote C. F. Bulmer, Clerk of the Crown in Chancery at Queen's Park, requiring him to issue a writ in that constituency, and the letter, in part, read: "If you do not by May 18th issue this writ, we shall have to conclude that you are not willing to carry out your statutory duty, and I shall then apply to the Supreme Court of Ontario for an order requiring you to do so."

This action will be taken under a law passed in 1904, after the then Premier Hon. G. W. Ross, had failed to call an election in North Renfrew, vacant nineteen months. The same Act also provides that any two members of the Legislature might on request require the issue of a writ.

Knowing, however, that no two members, particularly Government members of the present House, would dare do any such thing, the C.C.F. is going to take advantage of other means provided in the Act to force the issue.

It will be interesting to watch the proceedings, and still more interesting, if the C.C.F. succeed in opening these ridings, to follow the campaign and note the result of these by-elections. It is not too long ago to remember what happened in the North Renfrew by-election during the Ross regime, nor what happened to the same government is a very short time.

It is still more easy to remember what happened the Conservative government when the U.F.O. stepped into the political field in 1919.

In every one of the six vacant constituencies which, beside High Park, include Huron-Bruce, vacant since March, 1940; Cochrane South, vacant since May, 1940; Toronto-Bellwood, vacant since March, 1940; Kingston, March, 1940, and Lincoln, vacant since August, 1941, there has been a growing resentment not only against their disenfranchisement, but a still more bitter feeling against the high-handed and autocratic response to their appeals for representation, so that there is more than a possibility that a turnover will be recorded in some, if not all, of the ridings should the C. C. F. succeed in calling them.

Scarcely but the sensible image of the Infante. Like truth and justice it lives within us; like virtue and the moral law it is a companion of the soul.—Bancroft.

A Step Towards Dictatorship One Is Thirteen Disfranchised

From The Fort Erie Times-Review

OUR neighbouring contemporary, the Niagara Falls Evening Review, finds little fault with Mitchell Hepburn's refusal to give parliamentary representation to citizens in six Ontario ridings whose seats are now vacant. The Review says:

There are arguments on both sides in the C.C.F.'s demands for by-elections to fill the six vacancies in the legislature and Premier Hepburn's refusal to hold elections at this time. The Premier also is on good solid ground when he agrees that there are too many members in the legislature now. It is hard to have constituencies unrepresented but it is doubtful if the reduction in the number of legislators has had any bad effect on government. We could have just as good a job at Queen's Park with far fewer members than at present.

This pronouncement disregards completely a fundamental provision in the democratic form of government—which is that every citizen is entitled to the right to vote for the candidate of his choice to represent him in the legislature. Deny that right and you strike at the very foundation of the principle of government by the consent of the governed.

To say that just as good a job of governing would be done by far fewer members at Queen's Park is to say something with which a great many people will agree. But if a reduction in the membership of the provincial parliament is desirable, a redistribution of seats is the proper way to bring it about. Accomplishing it by denying to citizens the right to exercise their franchise for the election of representatives cannot be justified on either moral or constitutional grounds. Otherwise, it would only be a reduction ad absurdum to argue that the membership of the present provincial House should be reduced by half by giving representation to the eastern half of Ontario only. Yet, if that were done, citizens in the western half of Ontario would have no better cause for protesting than the electors in the six unrepresented ridings have now.

MORE than 18,000 electors, about one out of every thirteen in Ontario, have been disfranchised, most of them for two years or more, by the action of the Hepburn government in refusing to hold by-elections in six provincial constituencies.

The war has been made the pretext for this indefensible wholesale disfranchisement. The excuse has been that the cost of by-elections should not be incurred in war. Yet the war is being fought for democracy, and democracy is government by the people. To deprive six ridings of their representation in the legislature is a negation of democracy, a denial of the very principle for which the war is being fought. To object to these by-elections on the score of cost is to take the ground that the sabotaging democracy—which is what Mr. Hepburn's action amounts to—is justified by the saving of a comparatively small sum of money; that the cost of an election is more important than the election itself. For such a philosophy there is no possible excuse.

It has been said in some quarters that the provincial assembly is too large anyway. That is beside the point altogether. In a smaller assembly, if such were constituted, the voters now so long denied franchise in the six vacant seats would have representation. As it is they have none. Judging from the lists compiled for the last general election, their numbers are as follows:

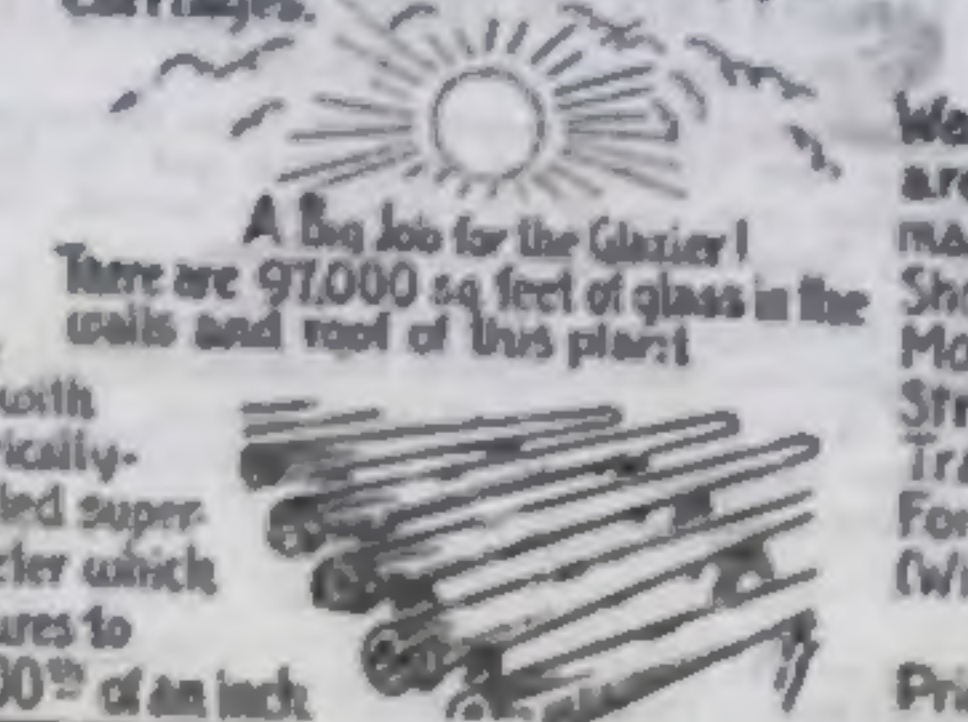

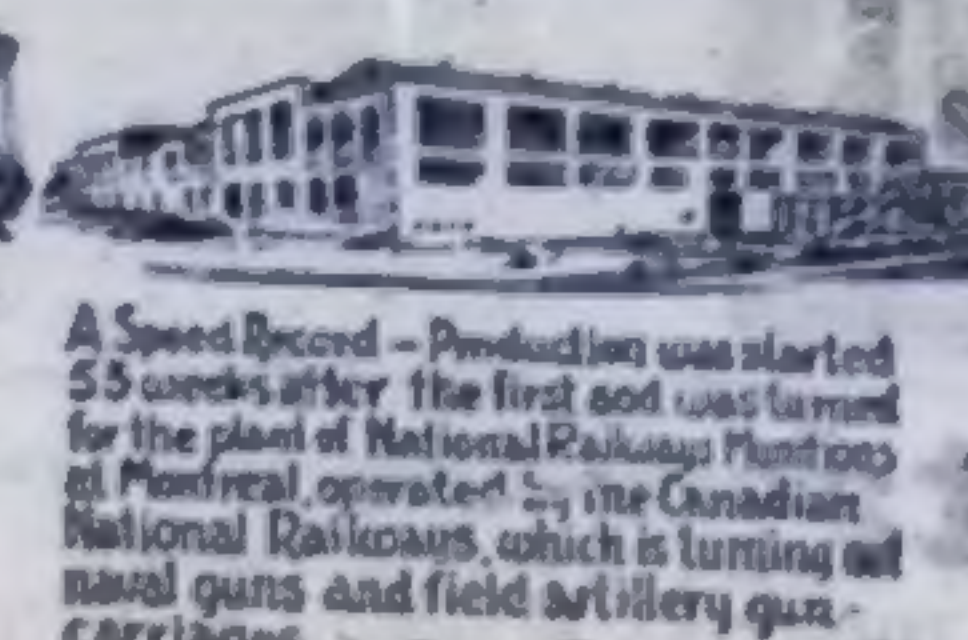

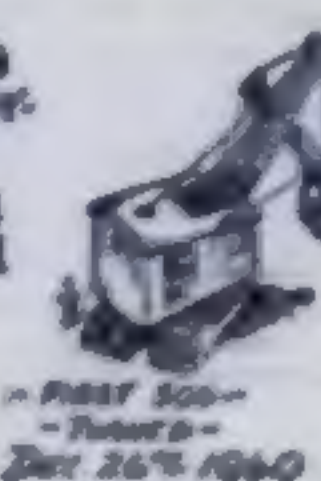

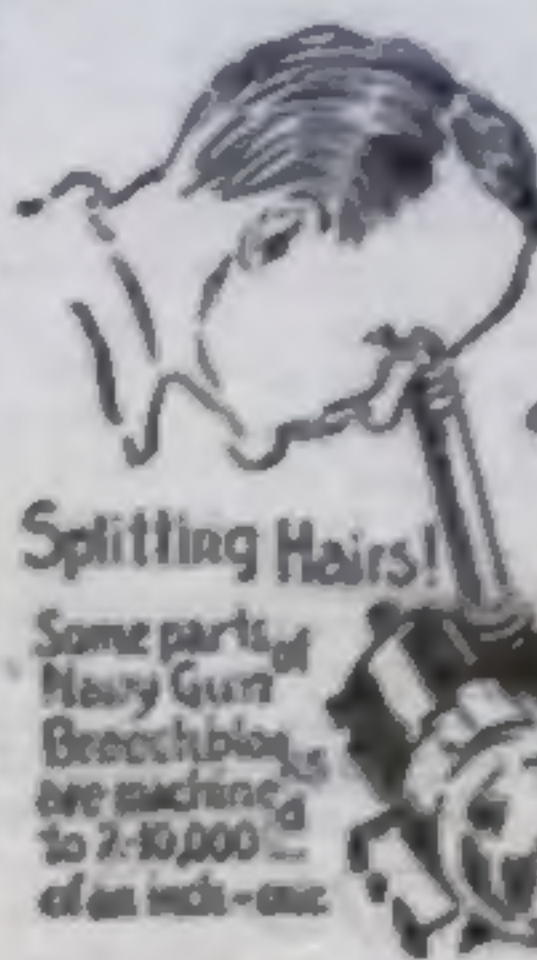

Tor-Bellwood, vacant since Feb., 1940, 28,622 voters disfranchised; Kingston, vacant since Feb., 1940, 19,448 voters disfranchised; Huron-Bruce, vacant since Mar., 1940, 16,707 voters disfranchised; Cochrane S., vacant since May 1940, 26,367 voters disfranchised; Tor-High Park, vacant since May, 1940, 31,535 voters disfranchised; Lincoln, vacant since Aug., 1941, 36,018 voters disfranchised. Total, 166,678.

It is disgraceful that these six constituencies should be deprived of representation in the assembly for so long a period. In Britain, since February of 1940, there have been about 75 by-elections. They (Continued on page 7)

Dr. Jessie McBean Speaks To W.M.S.

The Sectional Meeting of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society was held in the Presbyterian church, Smithville, on Tuesday afternoon. There was a splendid attendance of ladies from Beamsville, Grimsby, Hamilton, Stoney Creek and Port Colborne.

The district president, Mrs. MacArthur, of Beamsville, occupied the chair. An address of welcome was given by Mrs. Vance of Smithville. Greetings from the Hamilton Presbyterian were brought by Mrs. Donald Munro. Taking part in the Devotional service were Mrs. Dalrymple, Mrs. Stevens, and Mrs. Taylor-Munro.

Mrs. A. Stevenson, Grimsby, was appointed secretary for a two year term.

The guest speaker was Dr. Jessie McBean, who has given 36 years of service to missionary work in Southern China. Dr. McBean kept her listeners enthralled with the wonderful insights she gave them of Christian life in China during that time and its result directly and indirectly with the military life of China today.

A duet very beautifully rendered by Mrs. Waite and Mrs. MacArthur was very much enjoyed.

Departmental Secretaries heard from Mrs. D. Wilson, Mrs. McInnis, Mrs. Moffat, Miss Cuthbert, and Mrs. Whytock, all of Hamilton, also Miss Kinnear of Port Colborne.

At the close of the meeting a delectable luncheon was served by the Smithville ladies.

High Hat

The top hat, that insignia of a London "City" man, has been packed away in a handbox for the duration.

"The City", as London's business section is known is that ancient part of London once surrounded by battlemented walls. For generations every business man, from merchant prince or managing director to bank messenger and junior clerk, wore the traditional high silk hat. In the face of war's exigencies it has given way to the pith helmet but sensible cap.

Now that the s.t.s. helmet and the gas mask have become part of civilian every-day equipment, the top hat is literally "on the shelf."

WILLSON—CAMPBELL

The lovely old home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Campbell, Main West was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, when their daughter, Catharine, became the bride of Gray S. Willson, of Montreal, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Willson, of Winnipeg.

For the ceremony, performed by Rev. Fred Manning, Fifty United Church, Wilsons, the bridal couple took their place under a bell of white lilies and pink tulips, in the bay window of the drawing-room. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white silk jersey, cut on princess lines, with short train, and wore a halo cap of heirloom lace with fingertip veil. She carried a old-fashioned bouquet of shaded sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley in a frill of real lace.

Miss Margery Miller, Dunnville, bride's attendant, wore a heavenly blue silk jersey also princess style, with fitted jacket, and a matching hat with flared brim. Her flowers were a sheaf of pink butterfly roses. Charles Noble, of Burlington, was the groomsmen.

The bride's mother was becomingly gowned in dusty rose crepe with wine applique, and wine shoes, a corsage of rapture roses and self-drops completing the ensemble.

Miss Beatrice Fitzgerald, wearing a pretty frock of turquoise blue, with corsage of tokens and tallulah roses, played the wedding music.

The grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Campbell, of Michell, were among the guests. Mrs. Campbell was most attractive in a gown of wine lace with matching corsage of roses, and black hat.

The bride's going-away costume was a navy triple-shear frock, and top-coat of lighter blue Harris tweed. With this was worn a red hat of stroller type, navy shoes, navy and red accessories, and a corsage of white and red carnations.

The young couple will make their home in Montreal, where the groom is in Government service, on the Inspection Board, Bomb Division. The bride-room is a graduate of U.P.S., Toronto, where he received the degree B.S.A., last year. The bride also is a 1941 graduate of University College and a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

St. Andrew's W.A.

The packing of the bales for Gordon School, Punchnich, Saskatchewan, occupied the members of St. Andrew's Woman's Auxiliary on Monday afternoon at the Parish Hall. Mrs. G. F. Wheeler, Dorcas Secretary, was in charge of the proceedings.

The faithful band of workers had a fine outfit of new children's clothing and bedding to show for their winter's work, which goes to Indian children, wards of the church, who attend Gordon School where they receive training in Canadian citizenship. Thanks to Mrs. H. Kelson and other benevolent friends of the W.A., many Christmas gifts to gladden the hearts of the children next winter were included in the bale.

Members were happy to welcome Miss Harriet Walsh back to the Auxiliary after her winter spent in Bermuda.

The Thank-Offering fund will be completed at the June 1st business meeting, when Mrs. Robert Neale, Thank-Offering Secretary, will forward it to the Diocesan Board in Hamilton.

There will be no meeting on the holiday, May 25th, and the session will close for the summer with the business meeting on June 1st.

Music Hour

The Hour of Music given by the choir of Trinity United Church on Sunday evening was the second of its kind this spring,—we hope the second of a series.

That Grimsby people are keenly appreciative of fine music was indicated by the size of the audience, augmented by groups from other churches who came in after the regular service.

The organ and piano duets of W. F. Tufford and T. L. Dymond which introduced the program, were exquisitely rendered and showed the mastery of these artists over their keyboards.

The choir's first selection, "The Strain Upraise of Joy and Praise," by Sampson, set the tone for all that followed,—thanksgiving for the spring-tide awakening, and worship. "The Day is Past and Over," by Marks, "With a Voice of Singing"—Shaw, and Smart's setting of Te Deum were the choir's contribution.

Miss E. Tinknell's solos, "Alleluia," by Mozart, and "O Come to my Heart, Lord Jesus,"—Ambrose, and Hallot's "The Lord's Prayer," made delightful listening; while Miss Dorothy Eichmeier's always pleasing voice was heard in Van de Water's "The Good Shepherd."

"God is Spirit," as sung in quartette by Mrs. D. McIntosh, Miss R. Current, Mr. D. Current and Mr. H. Rayner, gave added pleasure to the occasion.

The congregation joined wholeheartedly with the choir in singing the glorious hymn, "Praise the Lord, Ye Heavens Adore Him," from the Foundling Hospital Collection.

The offering was given to the Red Cross.

Evensong

Ascension Day evensong in St. Andrew's Church last Thursday was conducted by the Rector, Rev. J. A. Ballard, the musical parts of the festival being taken by the joint choirs of St. Andrew's and St. Alban's Beamsville.

Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were sung to Tours' setting. A. K. Carthew, Beamsville, took the solo part in the anthem, "Look, Ye Saints, the sight is glorious."

The Ascension-tide hymns, See the Conqueror Mounts in Triumph, Hail the Day that Sees Him Rise, and Crown Him with Many Crowns, were sung by choir and congregation in unison.

Assisting in the service were Rev. Wray Andrews, Rev. A. F. Maunsell of Beamsville and Rev. Neil M. Leckie of Grimsby.

Miss Winifred Congdon, presided at the organ.

Cyril Hampshire, principal of Hamilton Conservatory of Music, is looking forward with keen anticipation to a cross-country tour from Hamilton to Victoria, B.C. Mr. Hampshire has been appointed examiner for the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and will be conducting examinations all the way to the coast.

DO YOU REMEMBER TEN YEARS AGO

From The Files of May 1932

A wide circle of friends in the community learned with deep regret of the passing of one of the most estimable and highly regarded residents of the district in the person of Christina Ann Armstrong, wife of Hon. Senator E. D. Smith whose death occurred on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock at her home, Helderleigh, Wilton, in her 71st year. The flags at the home and at the Stoney Creek monument were lowered to half mast in tribute to her memory.

Col. H. F. H. Hertzberg, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.C., general staff officer of military district No. 2, inspected the Lake Lodge Naval Cadet Corps on Monday afternoon. The corps looked very neat in their navy blue uniforms and white caps and presented a very smart appearance on the school parade ground. The following officers were in charge of the corps: Lieut. Haworth, R.N., Cadet Lieut. Alton Hoover, Second Lieut. Norman McDermid, Second Lieut. Eldred Barrow, Petty Officers Edgar F. Dunn and Harry Keenan and Band Corporal Don Fraser. Major (Rev.) Gore H. Barrow and Lieut. E. H. Hull accompanied Col. Hertzberg on the inspection.

Following the awarding of the contract for the paving of Depot Street, last week by the Grimsby town council, contractor Honsberg, of Vineland entered upon the work on Monday morning and is making rapid progress with the contract which is being carried out under the supervision of Engineers Rutherford and Ure, of St. Catharines.

At the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hermiston, Grimsby Beach, Wednesday afternoon last at four o'clock, Rev. Dr. Graham united in marriage Norma Rae, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hermiston, to Mr. Rupert L. Hatter, of Waterloo, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hatter, of Welland. The immediate family relatives, numbering 20, were present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Hatter left for New York on their honeymoon. They will reside in Beaverville on their return.

Rigid Regulations Placed On All New And Used Tires

Retreaded and used tires, used tubes, and retreading services, as well as new tires and new tubes, are now under rigid control, according to an announcement by Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply.

Effective tomorrow, May 15, the new order is designed to conserve Canada's rubber supplies for war purposes, to prevent hoarding, and to keep essential vehicles, including farm trucks and implements, in operation as long as possible.

The order tightens the previous control over new tires and new tubes. It sets up three classes of eligible vehicles, "A", "B", and "C", on a sliding scale gauged according to the usefulness of the vehicle to a country at war, and it rules out the 1,000,000 or more motorists who are no longer able to buy even a used tube.

When a dealer has two or more orders for a similar tire or tube, and he cannot fill both orders, he must give preference to the owner of a vehicle in a higher class.

Owners of vehicles in Class "A" are permitted to buy new tires, new tubes, retreaded tires, retreading services, used tires or used tubes. In this class are such vehicles as cars used by physicians, cars belonging to clergymen who serve two or more congregations more than three miles apart, cars used by clergymen in sparsely settled districts, trucks for road repairs, trucks for carrying farm products and foods, fire fighters' vehicles, police vehicles, and farm tractors and harvester combines, other than automobiles and trucks, for the operation of which tires and tubes are essential.

Owners of vehicles in Class "B" are permitted to buy retreaded tires, retreading services, used tires, and tubes. In this class are rural mail carriers, passenger cars or trailers used principally for the transportation of produce and supplies to and from his farm by a person whose principal occupation is farming, and who owns no truck.

Owners of vehicles in Class "C" may purchase only used tires and used tubes. Included in this class are vehicles used principally in the course of their duties by the following: Farm or road products inspectors, dentists or optometrists who serve more than one community, scrap buyers, sheriffs, or other law enforcement officers, servicemen who repair farm machinery, rural school teachers, rural undertakers, and newspaper reporters. Also covered in this class are horse-drawn vehicles and farm implements for the operation of which tires are essential.

CIVILIAN BOMBING IS GERMAN ANSWER TO R.A.F. BLASTS AT NAZI WAR PLANTS

London, Eng.—What Nazis hypocritically call "reprisal raids" are now a nightly horror in Britain as from a dozen to 50 black-crowned planes roam over completely non-military districts to unleash torrents of terror on the heads and homes of civilians. In "reprisal" for the R.A.F. bombing of Heinkel works and the Trosselheim docks, Nazis have smashed the beautiful buildings of Bath, rustic cottages in Kent, and the ecclesiastical sanctuaries in the cathedral cities of Exeter and Norwich.

Matching the surge of ice cold resentment these outrages have caused in the hearts of the British has been the rapid extension of relief services which the Canadian Red Cross provides for the victims of Nazis. The nightly blitting first of the west country, then east Anglia, then southwest and lastly southeast sections of the country has put an enormous strain on the Canadian Red Cross distribution system. Thanks to the decentralization program planned by Overseas Commissioner Scott and completed during the now-ended lull, the response of the Canadian Red Cross to any request for aid is immediate.

Answer: S.O.S. From Bath.

In answer to an S.O.S. from a Bath woman, voluntary service workers operating out of headquarters in Bristol and Reading where stocks of Canadian Red Cross clothing for the west country were centrally cached, dashed through Somerset lanes while the midnight air was still shivering with the echo of bombs from the stricken city. On their arrival they hastily established a temporary distributing centre and workers tolled through the raid with bombs dropping not a hundred yards away, smashing windows — and scattering parcels of Canadian underclothing which had just been placed on quickly constructed shelves.

I have just returned to London from Bath after the third raid. Rescue workers and Red Cross nurses are still searching for missing people. Although the silver rays of the moon clearly defined its historic buildings, Nazi airmen dropped shower flares. They were after the private houses of this famous place where the bedridden lay, and then they aimed their bombs with unrelenting accuracy at the sick and dying.

Red Cross nurses were among the first civil defenders to go into action. They were badly needed. In addition to a heavy death toll, there were a large number of injured who, thanks to drugs and bandages from Canada, were quickly given first aid by them. Red Cross angels of mercy who rushed to the scene in Canadian ambulances.

West Was Demolished

One street was almost entirely demolished. Trapped under the debris of one of the houses was an eight-year-old boy who guided rescue workers as they backed through the rubble by singing lull songs. When he was released he collapsed into the arms of a Red Cross nurse who, after administering restoratives, wrapped him in an afghan which the children of a Manitoba school had knitted and carried him in her arms to a casualty clearing station. That night thousands of folks were rendered homeless. Three hours after the raiders had scuttled back they returned and dropped heavy high explosives on the smouldering buildings. Then, skimming roofs and steeples, they machine-gunned nurses and women voluntary service workers as they tolled among the ruined homes carrying Canadian Red Cross clothing, blankets and foodstuffs to those made homeless. And as a Canadian ambulance laden with injured was driving into the gates of a large hospital which was flying a huge Red Cross flag, one of "Goring's Gallants" swooped down and took direct aim on the hospital destroying the block where raid victims were being treated.

Send your contributions to your local Red Cross branch, Provincial Division, or to the headquarters of The Canadian Red Cross Society, 55 Wellesley St., Toronto, Ont.

Loss By Weeds Totals $20,000,000

Weed Menace Is Fifth Column of Agricultural War Production, States John D. MacLeod, Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The Ontario weed menace might well be called the fifth column of agricultural war production, says John D. MacLeod, Crops, Seeds, and Weeds Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto. He points out that crops lost through weed infestation cost Ontario farmers twenty million dollars last year and unless stern efforts are made this year by farmers and municipal authorities the loss may be even greater.

"We must not relax our efforts," said Mr. MacLeod. "We should remember the undesirable weed legacy we were left after the last war, with ensuing crop losses that ran into the millions of dollars."

Mr. MacLeod agreed that an extra special effort would be needed to keep weeds under reasonable control this year. He emphasized that time and money spent in eradicating weeds would be well spent and provide dividends in increased crops that would more than offset any labor outlay.

He said his Department would make a special drive on weeds whose seeds are wind-borne, such as Perennial Sow Thistle, Canada Thistle and Wild Carrot. Chicory and Hawkweeds were a crop menace that were spreading rapidly and an extra special effort would be made to eradicate small patches of Field Bindweed.

Yellow Goat's-Head will soon be in flower and is frequently found in meadows, pastures and along headlands. It has an upright stem from one to three feet high; long, taper point leaves and large yellow flower heads from 1 to 2½ inches broad which are succeeded by seed heads resembling the dandelion seed head but are larger. These plants should be cut early to prevent them from seeding, states Mr. MacLeod.

The Foot-Path Way

The old path, the worn path, With a pack upon your shoulder,— Oh, there are pleasant places For walking men to know. So sing your catch the bolder Across the meadow spaces, Along the highway places, That lead where men should go.

The old path, the dim path, With fairy feet that patter,— Oh, there are magic places A-down the ferny glen But turn you with your clutter, For there are secret spaces, The children's special places, And never meant for men.

The old path, the steep path, To the dizzy ridges clinging,— Oh, there are tollsome places For walking men apart. You've lost your breath for singing, But the song of open spaces, Of jagged skyline places, Is working in your heart.

The new path, the hard path, With a pack upon your shoulder,— Oh, there are lonely places For walking men to go. Above the scrub and boulder,— Dawn-transfigured spaces, Stern and starlit places,— And it's these that you shall know!

Don't be a CUPBOARD QUISLING!

"Cupboard Quislings"! Is that too hard a name for people who selfishly lay in unnecessary stocks of clothes or food, or other goods for fear of shortages?

No! The name is not too hard, even though it may be earned through thoughtlessness. For in reality they are doing, in a petty, mean way, what the Quisling does in the open.

Anyone who buys more than is necessary for current needs—

- Is breaking his country's law for personal advantage.
- Is betraying his loyal neighbours and those who are not so well off as he.
- Is, in effect, depriving our fighting men of the munitions and supplies they must have to defend us.
- Is hindering our war effort and helping our enemies.

Loyal citizens avoid putting unnecessary and abnormal strains on our factories. In time of war, loyal citizens do not spend one dollar more on civilian goods than is absolutely necessary for current needs.

The law provides for fines up to $5, and imprisonment up to two years for hoarding; and hoarding is just another word for unnecessary selfish buying.

In cases where it is advisable for you to buy in advance of your immediate requirements — such as your next season's coal supply — you will be encouraged to do so by direct statement from responsible officials.

TAIL-WAGGER CHATS

DOGS THAT KILL SHEEP

A Serious Offence

By PHILOKUN

The owner of a Tail-Wagger has written to the Club begging us to ask owners who cannot feed their dogs properly not to turn them adrift but, rather than do that, to have them put away. There are cases in this district where the unfortunate dogs have taken to killing lambs, one farmer alone having lost as many as forty-two. We agree thoroughly with our correspondent, and have no hesitation in broadcasting his warning by means of these Chats. I am not convinced, however, that the number of homeless dogs is not far less than is believed. The dog is a friendly animal, craving for human society and sympathy, and if one loses himself it is his natural disposition to make up to someone else.

The police are vigilant, too. If they see one that is obviously without an owner they "arrest" him, take him to the police station, and if he cannot be traced and no one wants him he is put away. Very few people deliberately lose their dogs. This is not an easy thing to do, especially in the country, for they would be sure to find their way back unless they were taken by train some distance away.

These remarks are not meant to imply that the evil mentioned does not exist, but I fancy the culprits must be sought elsewhere. Farmers and other residents in rural districts are often careless about what happens to their dogs at night, although prudence insists that they should be kept under constraint. Numerous instances have been brought under my notice showing that the criminals have been sheepdogs that were permitted to roam after dusk. It is not an easy matter to bring the offence home to a particular animal or to catch him in the act, for sheep-keepers, seeing to know that they are doing wrong, are particularly secretive in their methods.

Sheep killing is a horrid thing at any time, it is far worse in these days when we want to rear all the livestock possible. The fact that the law provides for redress if the owner can be discovered is no compensation for the national loss occurred. Quite properly, the owner of a dog that chases or worries sheep may be fined and ordered to pay for the damage, and the magistrates also have power to insist upon the destruction of the animal. Some breeds have a worse reputation than others. Greyhounds and foxhounds that are out at walk frequently succumb to temptation, and I have been told that chow chows have a bad reputation, but there are not many of them in private ownership in country places.

In fact, the great majority of those who keep dogs as companions look after them properly and have them shut up at night. They do not have the chance of getting into mischief, but I do know that many sheepdogs, lurchers and others that are kept on farms and in cottages for utility purposes are left to look after themselves. It is surprising that they get into mischief.

Jam Quota This Year Is 300,000 Pounds

Women's Institute Branch And Red Cross To Co-operate in Gigantic Output For British Bomb-Victims.

Ontario Women's Institute members who last year in co-operation with the Red Cross Society were instrumental in forwarding 233,252 pounds of jam to Great Britain for the use of civilian war victims and Canadian troops in hospitals, are being asked to make 300,000 pounds of jam this year, states Miss Mary A. Clarke, Superintendent, Women's Institute Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

As in previous years, the Canadian Red Cross Society will provide the cans, labels and cases, and provide transportation to final destination. Sufficient sugar has been assured the enterprise and Institute members in non-fruit growing areas will have an opportunity to supply funds for sugar.

One hundred and fifty tons of jam will bring a lot of sweetness into the lives of British bomb victims, mostly children and old people. Hundreds of letters have been received from grateful recipients including many from mothers of children's homes who state the jam sent last year has been a welcome and health-giving addition to the children's diet.

While the work in connection with the actual jam making will be done by W.I. members this does not mean that contributions of fruit, sugar or money will not be gratefully accepted by them from citizens in general.

The jam making objective for Canada as a whole has been set at 600,000 pounds.

One In Thirteen Disfranchised By By-election Ban

are still being held regularly as vacancies occur. The war has come home to Britain far more closely than to Ontario, yet there the government is not deterred by considerations of cost or by the thought of "disturbing" the electorate. The democratic course is followed. In the period under review Mr. Hepburn has, it is true, held three by-elections — to get members of his cabinet elected. But he has disfranchised the electors of the other six vacant seats.

It is claimed that this has been done by agreement with the opposition. But what does that amount to? It only means, if true, that the leaders of two of the political parties have combined in the disfranchisement; a dual dictatorship. That two men or two dozen men should claim for themselves the right to override the rights of six or any other number of constituencies to representation in the legislative assembly is as absurd as it is undemocratic. It is not Messrs. Hepburn and Drew who elect members to that body; it is, or is supposed to be, the electors of the various ridings, including the six memberless ones. The free expression of the people's will is the root principle of democracy itself. If there is an agreement between government and opposition to deprive more than 185,000 electors of this right, the only thing indicated by that is that the opposition is not fulfilling its proper function — a fact which has long been suspected.

The C. C. F. is to make an attempt to have the courts order the necessary by-elections. The law says that "if the seat of a member of the assembly has been vacant for three months and no writ has been issued, the clerk of the crown in chancery shall issue the writ forthwith." The government's defence will apparently be that when this law was passed in 1904 no provision was made to force the government to appoint a returning officer to whom the writ would be issued. The legislature of that date evidently did not conceive of a government which would attempt to keep constituencies disfranchised in that way. It may be that the clerk of the crown in chancery should himself appoint returning officers under such circumstances.

The legal merits of the case are for the courts. But the morals of the case are plain for everyone to see. Six Ontario ridings are kept without representation in the legislature because the government (with the consent, it is said, of the opposition) denies them their democratic rights.

He who wishes to secure the good of others has already secured his own.—Confucius.

Technical Schools Hum To Keep War Machine Going

Technical schools throughout Canada are humming with activity as men and women are trained at top speed to keep pace with increasing manpower requirements of the armed services and war industries. Under the Department of Labour's War Emergency Training Program, young men are trained to become tradesmen in the Army and Air Force. Older men or others discharged from the services and women are learning trades to take up battle posts in Canada's war factories. These photos show pre-enlistment classes of the R.C.A.F. At left, radio mechanics are being initiated into the secrets of complicated instrument panels. A student receives instructions in aero-mechanics at right.

GARDEN SERVICE

— By GORDON LINDSAY SMITH —

Still Plenty of Time

Spring opened unusually early in many parts of Canada this year, but as generally happens after a warm spell, the weather turned cold again, and some enthusiasts who rushed their gardening operations probably regretted later.

Admittedly, there is a thrill in getting the garden planted weeks earlier than usual, and if all goes well there is also a thrill in picking the first flowers or sampling the first vegetables weeks ahead of the neighbours. But, as the experts point out, there is solid satisfaction at least in having the garden harvest last weeks longer than is possible when everything is planted on a single afternoon.

The beginner almost invariably suffers from an overdose of Spring Fever and plants too soon. There is no harm in planting a portion of the garden very early, but for maximum results all plantings, and this especially applies to vegetables, should be spread out. This prolongs the harvesting season of really fresh vegetables, eases the work of cultivation and planting, and makes for more even results.

In most parts of the Dominion there is still plenty of time to plant all vegetables, and of the tender and semi-tender sorts. It is not advisable to consider the main planting until now.

Bug Killers

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, is just as applicable to war against garden insects and diseases as it is to general health. The proper treatment, just as soon as the first danger shows or is expected, will win the battle. It is amazing the injury disease or insects can cause in a few hours once they are well established.

Available almost everywhere in Canada are cheap and effective commercial sprays and powders which will handle such pests as fungus, aphids, rust, wilt, cut worms, potato bugs, etc. In some cases these dusts or sprays are made of a combination of materials to cope with a variety of enemies. The sprays, of course, should be applied when the plants are dry and the dusts stick better when the plants are slightly moist with rain or a dew.

Generally speaking, all plant enemies are divided into three types — fungus, that mildew or wilt the foliage; sucking insects which produce the same results; and the eating kinds which literally devour the foliage. Burning or drying sprays and dusts will handle the first two, while the "eaters" should be destroyed with a poison.

Cultivation

Killing weeds is only one of the functions of garden cultivation. Of equal importance is the stirring up of the soil to prevent sourness, baking, and to check evaporation of valuable moisture. In the dryer sections of Canada the latter point is vital. By breaking up the surface we produce a mulch which checks the capillary action or upward movement of moisture to the top of the soil surface where it might be evaporated by the sun.

Usually one thorough cultivation of the garden previous to planting, or among the perennials and shrubs early in the Spring, followed by a couple more at two-week intervals during the growing season will be sufficient. But in dry years or seasons when weed growth is excessive, more may be needed.

Conservation And Care Of Bags And Rope

The shortage of jute and cotton bags and rope makes it necessary for every citizen and particularly every farmer, to conserve in every way possible the supply of bags and rope, so says A. M. Shaw, Chairman, Agricultural Supplies Board, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The Board is concerned over the increasing difficulty in obtaining new supplies. The following suggestions for conserving bags and rope is therefore, apposite:

- 1.—Bags, when not in use, should be hung in a dry place where rats and mice cannot get at them.
- 2.—Damp bags should be dried before storing.
- 3.—The usefulness of many bags can be extended by patching.
- 4.—Paper bags might be used in some instances instead of jute or cotton bags.
- 5.—Rope, particularly hay fork rope, should be stored by hanging over a beam where it is dry. Hay fork rope should not be stored in a pile on the floor near the barn door where it may be subjected to tramping and exposed to moisture.
- 6.—Rope, when in use, sometimes twists. These twists should be taken out, otherwise the rope is subjected to undue friction and cutting.
- 7.—Horses should not be allowed to step on the rope and every care should be taken to keep the rope from dragging in the dust and dirt. Particles of dirt working into the rope shorten the life of the rope.
- 8.—If the rope is longer than necessary, the extra length can be tied in knots at the double tree and enclosed in an old bag.

9.—Rope should not be exposed to undue strain from extra heavy loads or severe jerking.

10.—Keep all pulleys, car track, etc., in good working order. Do not allow rope to rub on beams or posts.

11.—One or more weak spots in the rope can be cut out and spliced. The short splices make the stronger join but if the eyes in the pulleys are not large enough to allow the short splice to pass through, the long splice can be used with success.

12.—All types of rope should have the ends whipped or bound to prevent fraying.

13.—When coiling a rope, it is usually best to lay it from left to right or in a clockwise direction.

14.—The life of old rope that has lost its oil dressing may be extended by treating it with an application of good lubricating oil or tallow or fish oil, in quantity no greater than the fibres will absorb.

15.—Keep acids away from rope.

16.—Small pulleys are extremely hard on rope. The diameter of the pulley should not be less than 5 times the diameter of the rope, i.e. a 1/4 inch rope requires a 5 inch pulley.

For more detailed information on "Care of Rope", see Ontario Bulletin 327, "Knots and Splices", pages 2 and 3.

The Children's Crusade

families, other homesick ones returned to their native towns. Many died of hardships.

The story of the French children is even more tragic. They struggled down to Marseilles after many tribulations, some stricken with disease and many dying. They too expected the sea to divide and provide them with an easy road to Jerusalem. One day, just as they were beginning to lose hope they were approached by two merchants who offered to take them to Palestine. "We want no money," they said; "we are only too glad to serve in such a holy cause." Suspecting nothing, the company boarded the seven vessels provided for them, but before the towers of Marseilles had faded into the distance the sinister purpose of the merchants had been discovered. The children were to be sold as slaves in the East. Two of the ships went down in a storm and all on board were lost. The others arrived in Alexandria and the children were sold.

After Christendom realized that the Children's Crusade was a failure, the whole movement was laid to the work of the devil. The legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin is thought to have been derived from the story of the crusade. — The Mentor.

Col. Gibson praised those responsible for the new organization, telling the delegates that "There is a great value in organization—though you can't do this overnight. I think, though," he went on, "that organization should be kept intact and you are going at it in the right way. In Canada we are striving to secure unity of effort to get the best results and that is what the Allied governments are trying to bring about."

"Propaganda is being carried on in this country," the minister warned. "We find people in Ontario saying Quebec is not loyal and people in Quebec saying Ontario is lax in doing its share. They are trying to weaken the confidence of the people in our allies. You are doing the right thing in bringing your association together. Until we did this in Hamilton we often found two Liberals running against each other. Now Hamilton returns three Liberals to the Legislature and two to Ottawa."

Montreal Celebrates Tercentenary

When Governor Maisonneuve and his little band of religious enthusiasts stepped ashore on that fair spring morning of April 18th, 1642, at the settlement that afterwards became Montreal, they may well have heard the words of saintly Father Dumont ringing in their ears. "That which you see, gentlemen, is only a grain of mustard seed, but it is cast by hands so pious and so animated with faith and religion, that it must be that God has great designs for it, since He makes use of such instruments for his work. I doubt not but this little grain may produce a great tree, that it will make wonderful progress some day, that it will multiply itself, and stretch out on every side."

On Saturday Montreal began a celebration of its 300th birthday with flags flying, parades, bands, and fireworks, while Sunday saw 300,000 people attending outdoor masses in the shadow of Mount Royal. Army, navy and airforce detachments formed a hollow square about the monument of Paul de Chomedey, Sieur de Maisonneuve, the city's founder, at a special memorial service.

Delegates of citizens, and ceremonial visits to the six religious orders which played so great a part in the early history of the city—Sulpicians, Jesuits, Franciscans, Grey Nuns, Les Dames de la Congregation, and the Sisters of Hotel Dieu. This is the first time in 32 years that the cloisters of Hotel Dieu, Jeanne Mance's hospital, were opened to the public as a feature of ceremonies commemorating its founding in 1642.

One of the largest French-speaking cities in the world, and greatest inland port, this island metropolis has now a population of a million and a quarter.

Truly the mustard seed has become a great tree.

Dear Sir:
Just a few lines to thank you for the gift of 300 cigarettes that I received on the 23rd of March. The Grimsby Chamber of Commerce is sure doing a fine job of helping to keep up the spirit of the Grimsby boys. We all appreciate it very much. And I sincerely wish you all a joyous Easter.

As ever,

Just dropping you a line to thank you for sending the Grimsby Independent which we enjoy reading so much. There's nothing like keeping up with the news at home. All the boys send their best regards to everyone at home.

L. Burrick.
March 20th, 1942.

Another sincere thanks to the Chamber of Commerce for this 4th package of cigarettes I have received from you. And this time I am not on the sick list, but back at work and there is surely lots of dentistry to be done. Sorry that I have nothing new to tell you. Fact is I get most my information about Grimsby boys over here from the Independent. Transportation here is to say the best of it and we don't go visiting much. Hope you are all well at home. Give my regards to all. Thanks again.

To The Editor

To the Editor of The Independent.

Sir: Is the sending of cigarettes to soldiers just a trifle overdone?

A recent editorial in the Canadian Medical Association Journal concludes a review of the prevalence of ulcers of the stomach detected among recruits for the army, by advising friends of soldiers to substitute malted milk tablets, chocolate bars and such things for the ulcer-aggravating cigarettes.

I suggest chewing gum. It has all the virtues ascribed to cigarettes, with none of the ill effects. It can be used where smoking is dangerous or impossible. It eases the pangs of thirst and hunger, reduces shock, relieves nerve tension, settles an upset digestion, lasts longer than a cigarette, and leaves no tail-tale odor.

With little true affection and less imagination mother and the girls persist in including cigarettes in their parcels to Jim and Bill. Their scout troop sends cigarettes to them; so does their Sunday School class; so does their form in High School; so does the hockey team; so does the Chamber of Commerce. Where is it going to end?

At Moore's Theatre

Appearing at Moore's Theatre this Monday and Tuesday, May 25 and 26 is the film "Keep 'em Flying" starring that great comedy team, Abbott and Costello.

The story deals with a circus stunt flyer drafted in the air corps. Abbott and Costello are his stooges and as co-pilots they are co-riots. The stunt flyer, Dick Foran, meets Carol Bruce, a songster and falls for her but finds competition in William Gargan, his former co-pilot. After proving himself a hero, Foran makes himself right with the army, and quite naturally, with Miss Bruce. Added hilarity is supplied by Martha Raye in a dual role.

The supporting cast includes Charles Lang and the Six Hits.

WOMEN JOIN INDUSTRIAL PARADE

Not long ago this attractive Canadian girl looked upon a file as something used solely to manicure her nails. Today, after joining thousands of other girls in war industries, she can handle a file as deftly as any man in turning out parts in an aircraft factory. It is estimated that between 50,000 and 75,000 women are now employed in industrial war work. Thousands more will be required to cope with manpower requirements as industry expands and men enlist.
